The Lille Métropole Museum was built by the architect Roland Simounet in verdant surroundings, east side of Lille. This France museum building of contemporary and modern art had been opened since a quarter of a century ago. After over four years' renovation and extension work, the new Lille Metropole Museum has opened its doors to the public on September 25th. The new museum houses one of the most beautiful collections of outsider art (Villeneuve d'Ascq) in Europe in the new extension, especially built on that occasion. Manuelle Gautrand Architects renovated and extended the museum by establishing a building which wraps around the existing arrangement in a fan-splay of long, fluid and organic volumes.
